FEES FOR THIS PAPER TO DEPOSIT
ACCOUNT NO. 23-0975

Sir:

In the Advisory Action dated February 18, 2004, it was indicated that the previous Responses did not place the application in condition for allowance for reasons of record.

In reply, it is not at all clear why the Response filed on January 26th and Supplemental Response filed on February 11, 2004 did not overcome the rejections of record since these papers set forth detailed reasons why the references of record are unsuggestive of the present claims.

Further, with regard to claim 14, the retinoic acid employed by Mehta is not a hydroxycarboxylic acid as required by the claim which is therefore unobvious from Mehta.

In this regard, it should be emphasized that retinoic acid (employed by Mehta) is toxic in large amounts and is available only by prescription. In consequence, it is clearly not at all suitable for use in the present invention.

For the foregoing reasons, it is apparent that the rejections on prior art are untenable and should be withdrawn.

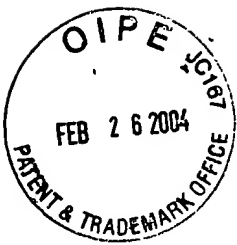

No further issues remaining, allowance of this application is respectfully requested.

Respectfully submitted,

Steven LEIGH et al.
